

Erika Grey

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Erika Grey (born August 1960) is an evangelical Christian author, commentator, radio host, analyst and prophecy expert.^{[1][2]} She is the principal authority on the European Union and Bible Prophecy.^[3] Her teachings are geopolitical vs. conspiracy theorist, which are primarily taught in evangelical Christian circles.^[4] Erika is best known for the term “geopolitical” which she used in relation to the fulfillment of Bible Prophecy.^[5]

Grey authors The Magi Report, which analyzes the areas of end time prophecy fulfillment along with the geopolitical difficulties the end time predictions will present governments and how they will cause future prophetic fulfillment. She speaks on Christian radio programs around the United States and in Canada. She has written for Yahoo, and Global Watch, a British publication.^[3] Grey is a member of the Society of Professional Journalists^[6] and is a bestselling author of Christian books including End of the World: The Revelation Prophecy, which entails in-depth interpretation of Revelation, the last book of the Bible. Erika’s other works include a secular book The Wind Cries Mary: Murders That Shook a Power Town, that took place in her home town New Canaan, Connecticut. The book revolves around a murder that impacted the community when she was a child and enlisted criminal profiler Greg Cooper, a protégé of John Douglas.^[7]
