TABLE OF AUTHORITIES .....	iii
STATEMENT PURSUANT TO FED. R. APP. P. 29(a) & 29(c)(5) .....	xi
INTERESTS OF AMICI CURIAE .....	1
INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT.....	1
ARGUMENT .....	6
I. A Wide Cross-Section Of American Religious Traditions Recognizes The Dignity Of Lesbian And Gay People And Their Relationships .....	7
A. The Inherent Dignity Of Lesbian And Gay Individuals Informs The Theology Of Numerous Religious Believers And Bodies.....	8
B. A Vast Spectrum Of American Faith Groups And Religious Observers Affirms Same-Sex Couples’ Relationships In A Multitude Of Ways, Including By Celebrating And Solemnizing Their Marriages.....	11
II. Recognizing The Necessary Distinction Between Civil And Religious Marriage, A Growing Number Of Faiths Support Civil Marriage Equality.....	15
III. Permitting Same-Sex Couples To Marry Civilly (Or Recognizing Such Marriages Lawfully Performed) Will Not Impinge Upon Religious Beliefs, Practices, Or Operations, But Rather Will Prevent One Set Of Religious Beliefs From Being Imposed Through Civil Law.....	22
A. Affirmance Would Not Interfere With The Exercise Of Religious Freedoms, Including The Freedom To Set Parameters For Religiously Sanctioned Marriage That May Differ From Those Established Under Civil Law .....	23

B.	Civil Marriage Of Same-Sex Couples Does Not Unconstitutionally Burden Religious Organizations’ Ability To Operate And Govern Their Own Religious Affairs .....	26
C.	While Amici Respect All Fellow Faiths, Including Those That Embrace Different Religious Views On Marriage, It Is Constitutionally Impermissible To Impose Religious Views Through Civil Law To Curtail Civil Marriage Rights Of Same-Sex Couples .....	28
	CONCLUSION .....	30
	CERTIFICATE OF COMPLIANCE WITH FED. R. APP. P. 29(b) & 32(a) .....	31

Counsel for Amici Curiae

December 19, 2014

INTERESTS OF *AMICI CURIAE

Amici curiae (“Amici”) represent a broad range of religious stakeholders who support equal treatment for same-sex couples with respect to civil marriage. While Amici come from faiths that have approached issues affecting lesbian and gay people and their families in different ways over the years, they are united in the belief that, in our diverse and pluralistic society, particular religious views or definitions of marriage should not be permitted to influence which couples’ marriages the state recognizes or permits. Such rights must be determined by religiously neutral principles of equal protection under the law.

The individual interests of each of the Amici are listed in Addendum A to this brief.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

Over a century and a half ago, Alexis de Tocqueville reflected on the central role of religion in the birth of the English colonies in America and its “peculiar power” in the cultural life of the United States, while simultaneously observing the necessary corollary that lies at the heart of religious freedom: “In America religion has, if one may put it so, defined its own limits. There the structure of religious life has remained entirely distinct from the political organization. It has therefore been easy to change ancient laws without shaking the foundations of ancient beliefs.”<sup>1</sup>

Tocqueville’s reflection bears directly on the case before this Court. By historical and legal tradition, American pluralism extends to religion and its expression. Amici here embrace and embody that pluralism and bear witness to the diversity of religious viewpoints on marriage across various faiths and denominations. While Appellants passingly assert that “[t]here are ample non-religious justifications for Florida’s traditional definition of marriage,” certain amicus curiae organizations urge reversal based, in part, on amorphous concerns about religious freedom, and imply the existence of a near-universal belief with respect to marriage within and across religions.<sup>2</sup> In contrast, Amici here bear witness to the diversity of religious viewpoints on marriage, and submit that the judgment below should be affirmed as consistent with fundamental principles of equal protection and religious freedom.

The American religious panorama embraces a multitude of theological perspectives on lesbian and gay people and same-sex relationships. A vast range of religious perspectives affirms the inherent dignity of lesbian and gay people, their relationships, and their families.<sup>3</sup> This affirmation reflects the deeply rooted belief, common to many faiths, in the essential worth of all individuals and, more particularly, the growing respect accorded within theological traditions to same-sex couples. Thus, some faiths celebrate same-sex couples' marriages identically to those of different-sex couples. Others solemnize same-sex relationships in ways other than marriage.

Faiths embracing same-sex couples – both theologically and with respect to the distinct issue of equality under civil law – participate in the mainstream of American religious observance. They include Mainline Protestant denominations such as the United Church of Christ and the Episcopal Church; the Unitarian Universalist Church; portions of the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers); and Judaism's Reform, Reconstructionist, and Conservative movements. Millions of religious individuals from other faiths also embrace and celebrate same-sex couples, including members of many other Mainline and Evangelical Protestant denominations, Roman Catholics, Mormons, Orthodox Jews, and Muslims. This grand mosaic includes Floridians, many of whom – of diverse faiths – today celebrate and embrace equal rights for same-sex couples and their families. Amici who are Florida faith leaders are a testament to this growing embrace of equality within mainstream religions in the state.

Eliminating discrimination in civil marriage will not impinge upon religious doctrine or practice. All religions would remain free – as they are today with thirty-three states and the District of Columbia permitting same-sex couples to marry – to define religious marriage any way they choose. Nor would affirmance interfere with religious institutions’ or individuals’ constitutionally protected speech or activities. The “religious liberty” concerns invoked by certain amici supporting reversal<sup>4</sup> relate to conflicts that already can and sometimes do arise under public accommodation laws whenever religiously affiliated organizations operate in commercial or governmental spheres. Courts know how to respond if civil rights law enforcement infringes First Amendment rights.

Certain amici supporting reversal have argued that permitting civil marriages of same-sex couples would gut a longstanding definition of marriage informed by “religious doctrines.”<sup>5</sup> But crediting such arguments would both enshrine a particular religious belief in the law – itself prohibited under the Establishment Clause – and implicitly privilege religious viewpoints that oppose marriage equality over those that favor it. The religious beliefs of certain individuals or faith groups prevalent in any one state cannot be permitted to determine the applicability of fundamental constitutional principles that are national in scope.

For these and other reasons, civil recognition of same-sex relationships, including through lawful marriage, is fundamentally consistent with the religious pluralism woven into the fabric of American law, culture, and society. Affirmance in this case would not “take sides” with one religious view against another or constitute an attack on religion. Nor would it signal a judicial imprimatur on changing social mores. Rather, affirmance would recognize the creative tension inherent in religions’ interface with our pluralistic, changing society while confirming that all, regardless of faith, are entitled to equal protection under the law.

ARGUMENT

The American religious landscape is vast and diverse.<sup>6</sup> Religious adherents differ on contentious issues, and religious bodies have themselves evolved and disagreed over time – on marriage as well as other civil rights and social issues.<sup>7</sup>

<sup>6</sup> According to one national survey, more than 90% of Americans believe in God or a universal spirit and more than 80% have some formal religious affiliation. U.S. Religious Landscape Survey, Pew Forum on Religion & Public Life, Religious Beliefs and Practices: Diverse and Politically Relevant (June 2008), at 5, 8, available at <http://religions.pewforum.org/pdf/report2-religious-landscape-study-full.pdf>. Religious affiliations and viewpoints also are diverse:

- i. While over 75% of religiously affiliated Americans are Christian, this group is comprised of: Protestants, including Evangelical (26.3%), Mainline (18.1%), and Historically Black (6.9%) churches; Roman Catholics (23.9%); Mormons (1.7%); Jehovah's Witnesses (0.7%); Orthodox (0.6%); and Others (0.3%).
- ii. Other religiously affiliated Americans are diverse as well, comprised of Jews (1.7%), Buddhists (0.7%), Muslims (0.6%), Hindus (0.4%), and other faiths (approximately 1.5%).
- iii. Yet other sizeable blocks of the American public are unaffiliated, whether agnostic (2.4%), atheist (1.6%), or nothing in particular (12.1%).

Id. at 217. In Florida, 26% of the population identified as Catholic, 25% as Evangelical Protestant, 15% as Mainline Protestant, 8% as Historically Black Protestant, 3% as Jewish and 16% as Unaffiliated. U.S. Religious Landscape Survey, Pew Forum on Religion & Public Life, Religious Affiliation: Diverse and Dynamic at 98 (February 2008), available at <http://religions.pewforum.org/pdf/report-religious-landscape-study-full.pdf>.

<sup>7</sup> See Michael Perry, Religion in Politics, 29 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 729, 772 n.94 (1996) (chronicling shifts in religions' views on usury, the dissolubility of

In view of that history and the wide range of modern religious thought on same-sex unions, it would be a mistake to elevate any one view on marriage above all others as the “Christian” or “religious” view. Indeed, it would be constitutionally inappropriate, because civil marriage is a secular institution, see Maynard v. Hill, 125 U.S. 190, 210 (1888), and the Constitution bars the government from favoring certain religious views over others, see Larson v. Valente, 456 U.S. 228, 244 (1982). Religious freedom means that all voices may contribute to our national conversation, but particular religious perspectives on marriage cannot be permitted to control the civil definition of marriage for all.

With time, and across traditions, religious Americans have affirmed that the dignity of lesbian and gay people logically and theologically follows from the premise that all persons have inherent dignity. In some traditions, this affirmation has affected religious practice – e.g., in clergy ordination. In others, it has led to various forms of religious affirmation of same-sex unions. All of this confirms marriages, and slavery, and noting that “[i]n each case one can see the displacement of a principle or principles that had been taken as dispositive”). As one example, the American Baptist Church once believed that churches and other institutions should be segregated on the basis of race, but later revised that view. See Pamela Smoot, Race Relations: How Do Baptists Treat Their Brothers and Sisters?, in History Speaks To Hard Questions Baptists Ask (2009), available at <http://www.baptisthistory.org/smootracerelations.pdf>.

that no one “religious” view of even the rite of marriage predominates in America, putting aside the separate question of whether there is a common religious viewpoint on access to civil marriage.

A. The Inherent Dignity Of Lesbian And Gay Individuals Informs The Theology Of Numerous Religious Believers And Bodies

Nearly three decades ago, the United Church of Christ, with 1.1 million members today, adopted a policy of membership nondiscrimination with regard to sexual orientation.<sup>8</sup> In 1989, the 45th General Assembly for the Union of Reform Judaism, which represents 1.3 million Reform Jews, resolved to “urge [its] member congregations to welcome gay and lesbian Jews to membership, as singles, couples, and families” and to “embark upon a movement-wide program of heightened awareness and education to achieve the fuller acceptance of gay and lesbian Jews in our midst.”<sup>9</sup> Many other faiths similarly embrace the foundational

Indeed, religious individuals have demonstrated an increasingly positive view of lesbian and gay Americans. According to a Public Religion Research Institute study, the majority of Americans from most major religious groups have positive moral and theological views of gay and lesbian people, including 62% of Roman Catholics, 63% of white Mainline Protestants, and 69% of non-Christian, religiously affiliated Americans.<sup>16</sup>

Meanwhile, 57% of white Mainline Protestants and 50% of American Roman Catholics support the ordination of gay and lesbian clergy.<sup>17</sup>

Unsurprisingly, therefore, some denominations – both Christian and Jewish – long have permitted openly lesbian and gay clergy.<sup>18</sup> Others more recently have amended their practices to admit openly lesbian and gay people to various forms of

II. Recognizing The Necessary Distinction Between Civil And Religious Marriage, A Growing Number Of Faiths Support Civil Marriage Equality

More than a century ago, the Supreme Court held that “marriage is often termed . . . a civil contract . . . and does not require any religious ceremony for its solemnization.” Maynard, 125 U.S. at 210. Amici are therefore mindful that their own theological perspectives on marriage are distinct from the civil law on <sup>27</sup> For example, the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America’s (“ELCA”) 2009 Churchwide Assembly resolved by a vote of 619 to 402 to “commit itself to finding ways to allow congregations that choose to do so to recognize, support and hold publicly accountable lifelong, monogamous, same-gender relationships.” Hanson, supra note 19. Following that action, more than 300 ELCA congregations have performed blessings over same-sex couples’ unions, while many more have adopted other policies and practices affirming same-sex couples’ relationships. See ReconcilingWorks, RIC Congregations List, available at <http://www.reconcilingworks.org/ric/ric-congregations-list> (last visited Dec. 17, 2014).

The Mormon Church, too, announced that “the Church does not object to rights for same-sex couples regarding hospitalization and medical care, fair housing and employment rights, or probate rights.” The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Church Responds to Same-Sex Marriage Votes (Nov. 5, 2008), available at <http://www.mormonnewsroom.org/article/church-responds-to-same-sex-marriage-votes> (last visited Dec. 17, 2014).

marriage. Recognizing that civil and religious marriage necessarily are two different things, and further undercutting any claim that religion speaks with one voice on marriage, many religions – including those represented by Amici here – have distinct positions supporting equal civil marriage rights for same-sex couples.

Two Christian denominations that trace their history directly to the Puritans of New England support civil marriage for gay and lesbian couples.<sup>28</sup> Eighteen years ago, in 1996, the Unitarian Universalist Association formally resolved to support equal civil marriage rights.<sup>29</sup> In 2004, the Association further affirmed that “Civil Marriage is a Civil Right” and opposed any amendment of the United States Constitution to bar same-sex couples from marrying.<sup>30</sup> The following year, in 2005, the United Church of Christ “affirm[ed] equal marriage rights for couples regardless of gender and declar[ed] that the government should not interfere with couples clear majority of people in religiously diverse Florida now support marriage equality for same-sex couples.<sup>48</sup>

While individual liberties should not be subject to public opinion polls, the preceding surveys make clear that American religious thought and practice embrace a rich diversity. No one view speaks for “religion” – even if, contrary to the Establishment Clause, it were appropriate to give weight to religious views in the application of the Constitution’s secular promise of equal protection.

III. Permitting Same-Sex Couples To Marry Civilly (Or Recognizing Such Marriages Lawfully Performed) Will Not Impinge Upon Religious Beliefs, Practices, Or Operations, But Rather Will Prevent One Set Of Religious Beliefs From Being Imposed Through Civil Law

Affirming civil marriage rights for same-sex couples will not threaten the First Amendment freedom of all religious communities to decide which unions are and are not consistent with their religious beliefs. Nor will affirmance here unduly burden religious persons and institutions in the pursuit of their public and business activities. To the contrary, reversal predicated on religious grounds, including the notion that Florida may (under any standard of review) deny equal protection to one sub-group in order to preserve the “religious liberty” of those who wish to discriminate against them, would improperly favor one set of religious views (e.g., rejecting civil marriage equality) against other religious views (e.g., like those of Amici here, favoring equal treatment under law for same-sex couples).

<sup>48</sup> See Steve Rothaus, Report: About 57 percent of Floridians now support marriage equality for same-sex couples, Miami Herald, Feb. 27, 2014 (citing Public Religion Research Institute polling ), available at <http://miamiherald.typepad.com/gaysouthflorida/2014/02/report-about-57-percent-of-floridians-now-support-marriage-equality-for-same-sex-couples.html> (last visited Dec. 17, 2014).

A. Affirmance Would Not Interfere With The Exercise Of Religious Freedoms, Including The Freedom To Set Parameters For Religiously Sanctioned Marriage That May Differ From Those Established Under Civil Law

Any purported concern that marriage equality for same-sex couples would interfere with religious practice in Florida is wholly illusory. However civil authorities define marriage, existing constitutional principles protect the autonomy of various religious entities to define religious marriages to comport with their respective tenets. See Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church & Sch. v. EEOC, 132 S. Ct. 694, 709 (2012) (affirming principle that certain “matter[s] are” ‘strictly ecclesiastical,’” meaning they are “the church’s alone” (citation omitted)). In this manner, religion and the state each respect the other’s own proper realm. See generally McCollum v. Bd. of Educ., 333 U.S. 203, 212 (1948) (“[T]he First Amendment rests upon the premise that both religion and government can best work to achieve their lofty aims if each is left free from the other within its respective sphere.”).

This tradition of respect for religious autonomy has, indeed, permitted various religions to define religious marriage in ways that would be unenforceable under civil law – declining to sanctify or even recognize, for example, marriages between persons of different faiths and races, or successive marriage following divorce. Conservative Judaism, for example, prohibits interfaith marriages,<sup>49</sup> as did the Roman Catholic Church’s Code of Canon Law for much of the twentieth century.<sup>50</sup> The Mormon Church discouraged interracial marriage well after the Supreme Court’s ruling in Loving v. Virginia, 388 U.S. 1 (1967), that the Constitution requires states to allow interracial civil marriages.<sup>51</sup> And the Roman Catholic Church teaches that “[t]he remarriage of persons divorced from a living, lawful spouse is not permitted by God’s law as taught by Christ,”<sup>52</sup> and Roman Catholic priests “cannot recognize the union of people who are civilly divorced and remarried,”<sup>53</sup> even though states do.

<sup>51</sup> See Interracial Marriage Discouraged, The Deseret News, June 17, 1978, at 4 (“Now, the brethren feel that it is not the wisest thing to cross racial lines in dating and marrying.” (quoting President Spencer W. Kimball in a 1965 address to students at Brigham Young University)).

The existence and persistence of such differences demonstrate that affirmance here would not burden religious liberty. Were Florida to recognize and permit the civil marriages of same-sex couples – as they do for interfaith couples, interracial couples, and couples re-marrying after divorce – religions that disapprove of such unions would remain free to define religious marriage however they wish. All faith groups could continue to withhold spiritual blessing from any marriages and indeed bar those entering into them from being congregants at all, just as they are now free to do so on grounds of faith, race, prior marital status, or any other characteristic deemed religiously significant.

Amici urging reversal fail to explain how their religious practice would be burdened by according other people equal civil marriage rights. Leaving aside the public accommodation law issues addressed infra in Point III(B), amici express a generalized concern that opponents of equal marriage rights will somehow be prevented from expressing their religious conscience on such matters. See, e.g., Br. of North Carolina Values Coalition, supra note 2 at 26 (arguing that “redefining marriage” would constitute “judicial intrusion on thought and speech” that “encroaches heavily on religion – a right that, unlike even traditional marriage, the Constitution explicitly guarantees.”).

But the Free Exercise Clause does not protect religious actors from reactions to their expressed views. There is no protected constitutional right not to be considered – correctly or incorrectly – a “discriminator.” It is no accident that the Free Exercise Clause shares an amendment with the Free Speech Clause, because robust enforcement of all constitutional guarantees best ensures equal access for all voices to discourse in the public square. See William P. Marshall, Solving the Free Exercise Dilemma: Free Exercise as Expression, 67 Minn. L. Rev. 545, 546-47 (1983) (arguing free exercise of religion bears directly on free speech, both having their proper public dimension, with Religion Clauses, together, offering “unitary protection for individual liberty”).

Eliminating Florida’s unconstitutional and unequal treatment of same-sex couples under civil law would not change, mandate, control, or interfere with any parties’ religious practices. The religious freedoms embodied in the Constitution guarantee that diverse religious traditions and beliefs, including the sole right to define who can marry religiously, will flourish regardless of changes in civil marriage laws.

B. Civil Marriage Of Same-Sex Couples Does Not Unconstitutionally Burden Religious Organizations’ Ability To Operate And Govern Their Own Religious Affairs

Some amici supporting reversal nonetheless suggest that allowing the civil marriages of same-sex couples will curtail religious organizations’ ability to operate their own affairs and serve their communities. For example, amici North Carolina Values Foundation and Liberty, Life, and Law Foundation devote the final pages of their brief to arguing that “[o]ur judicial system seems to be allergic to religious expression or influence in the public square” and “brush[es] aside the convictions of – and challenges faced by – religious organizations and citizens.” Br. of North Carolina Values Coalition, supra note 2 at 26, 28. They proceed to argue that “[a]nti-discrimination mandates have already spawned a multitude of legal actions,[] and that threat will escalate exponentially unless the political process is allowed to operate so that exemptions can be carved out to respect rights of conscience.” Id. at 26 & n.7 (characterizing Elane Photography v. Willock, 309 P.3d 53 (N.M. 2013), cert. denied, 134 S. Ct. 1787 (Apr. 7, 2014), as involving a “Christian photographer subjected to draconian financial penalties for refusing to photograph a same-sex commitment ceremony”).

But the types of disputes anticipated by these amici have more to do with existing civil rights laws barring discrimination based on sexual orientation, where such laws exist, than with any conflicts likely to arise based on marital status should this Court affirm the judgments below. The extent to which any religious institution or business is regulated as an employer or a public accommodation is determined by existing statutes and relevant, binding case law. Indeed, just two years ago the Supreme Court unanimously ruled that an employment discrimination claim by the former employee of a religious institution had to yield to the First Amendment right of the employer to determine who qualifies as a minister under its religious understanding of that term. Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church & Sch., 132 S. Ct. at 707, 709. When religious institutions act in a more secular sphere, the balance between civil rights enforcement and First Amendment liberties may vary in particular cases. But such issues have nothing to do with the constitutional right to marry and, in any event, are not presented for decision here.

C. While Amici Respect All Fellow Faiths, Including Those That Embrace Different Religious Views On Marriage, It Is Constitutionally Impermissible To Impose Religious Views Through Civil Law To Curtail Civil Marriage Rights Of Same-Sex Couples

Since this nation’s founding, the concept of religious liberty has included the equal treatment of all faiths without discrimination or preference. See Larson, 456 U.S. at 244 (“The clearest command of the Establishment Clause is that one religious denomination cannot be officially preferred over another.”). Government action defining marriage rights on religious or quasi-religious grounds violates this principle by putting the force of law behind one set of religious views.

Several amici in this case urge reversal on avowedly religious grounds that would wreak havoc with the Establishment Clause. For example, amici Catholic Bishops, et al. explain that some Evangelical Christians’ opposition to allowing same-sex couples to marry is based on “a biblical view focused on uniting a man and woman in a divinely sanctioned companionship for the procreation and rearing of children and the benefit of society.” Br. of U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, supra note 5, at 11. But it would be plainly improper to enshrine such religious views in civil law. “Courts are not arbiters of scriptural interpretation” and “should not undertake to dissect religious beliefs.” Thomas v. Review Bd. of Indiana Employment Sec. Div., 450 U.S. 707, 715-16 (1981).

Certain amici favoring reversal insist that their doctrinal opposition to marriage for same-sex couples is fueled not by animus towards gay people but rather “[f]idelity to [r]eligious [b]eliefs” regarding “the personal, familial, and social virtues of traditional marriage.” See Br. of U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, supra note 5, at 9, 10. But it is not the dimension of animus that renders these justifications irrelevant and inadmissible to determine the permissible scope of civil marriage rights – it is the fact that these views are frankly religious. Any attempt to have the Court embrace specifically religious views or definitions of marriage must be rejected – among other reasons because that result would disfavor and disadvantage other religious believers, like Amici here, who do not embrace the arguments or conclusions of amici seeking reversal.

By affirming the judgments of the courts below without reference to religiously based arguments, and affirming the constitutional promise of equal treatment for different- and same-sex couples, this Court will ensure that civil law neither favors nor disfavors any particular religious viewpoint, and it will leave individual faith communities free to determine for themselves whether or not to add religious sanction to particular unions.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Amici respectfully submit that the Court should affirm the judgment of the court below that Florida's ban on marriages of same-sex couples is unconstitutional.

Respectfully submitted,
