Comments –	She had lots of news coverage, a personal visit from former Gov. Pat Quinn (D-Ill.), and subsequently, relief from her oppressors – and a “fair day in court.” She was indeed a victim, and thus I'm glad she got the help she needed.	By far more newsworthy based on numbers of verified court action or other administrative complaints filed. Moreover, since Mr. Daniggelis did not actually sign away his house when filling out mortgage rescue scheme paperwork like Lessie Towns (she was tricked; he wasn't: His signature, as I show elsewhere, was forged), therefore he is more deserving of a “fair day in court” which will probably only happen if either ((A)) a miracle and/or ((B)) news coverage occurs.

For fun, try comparing the various recent “alleged criminals”\(\*\) of the various “Mortgage Rescue Scam/Schemes” **fraud** in CHICAGO, IL

(*) “alleged criminals” here refers to these people as culprits and suspects, but they are innocent until proven guilty –and, as with all 'criminals' and/or 'alleged criminals,' they are usually not guilty of all the crimes in the cases in question, as each person is unique and different in their levels of guilt or innocence.
